

Using data cited in the first lecture of the course, titled “Administration, Plans, and Requirements of the Course”, explain why a generative AI assistant (a copilot) to programming is unlikely to include code that detects and handles all bad inputs to a feature when the generative AI is given a prompt to implement the feature that does not explicitly describe the bad inputs that the code is supposed to check and handle.